

Global warming

● Wars and violent conflicts are likely to increase both in numbers and geographical extent later in the 21st century as climate change leads to water shortages in some places and the drowning of land in others. Millions of people will be forced to move when resources elsewhere are already stretched.