

‘Good
Europeans’
yes -
but citizens
of the world
first

Those living in Europe should be ‘good Europeans’ but this does not, and should not, equate to supporting the EU or particular policies of the EU.

It is important also to resist the substitution of an ‘EU European identity’ for a national identity when the most important commitment should be as a ‘citizen of the world’.